Workshops

Experienced instructors will teach proper scanning techniques for each joint in hands-on scanning workshops on live models. Attendees will be divided into small groups for each scanning session to provide ample time for individual scanning. A physician faculty member will be available during workshop sessions to answer questions and to assist with hands-on scanning.

Educational Objectives

At the completion of this workshop attendees will:

- Describe scanning techniques for the shoulder, wrist, knee and ankle.
- Recognize common pathological structures visualized in the joints studied.
- Demonstrate performance of ultrasound scanning protocols of joints on live models.

About this Workshop

Ultrasound imaging of the musculoskeletal system is a rapidly growing specialty. Technologic advances and portability of systems are making ultrasound a valuable and cost effective tool for the diagnosis and treatment of joint abnormalities. Presentations of proper scanning techniques with a group demonstration of scanning, a review of the pathology encountered followed by personal hands-on instruction in scanning will make this an effective learning experience. During the hands-on workshop, attendees will be provided with an opportunity to learn proper imaging techniques for the shoulder, wrist, knee and ankle. Learning will be facilitated through an interactive and practical format with the direct supervision of our knowledgeable and experienced faculty. A presentation on reimbursement for MSK US will also be provided during Friday's reception. This workshop is for radiologists, sports medicine physicians, orthopedic physicians as well as sonographers, athletic trainers, fellows, residents and others interested in improving their skills in musculoskeletal ultrasound imaging.
